statements of Water Division and Use must be filed by riparian and pre 1914 appropriative water users as set forth in Water Code section 5100. An appropriative right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914, new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State. Appropriative rights can be granted to waters "foreign" to the natural stream system.

A different watershed, water previously stored by others, return flows from use of groundwater, or other "foreign" water to the natural stream riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or divert water which originates in riparian rights to the served parcel. Generally, a riparian user must share the water supply with other riparian users. Reservation of riparian rights as the water source and must never have been served from the sources of supply by an intervening parcel without the same watershed as the water source and must use water on his riparian land. The above discussion is provided for general information. For more specific individual concerns, please contact us directly or write to this office. We have several pamphlets available. They include: (1) Statements of Water Division and Use, (2) Information Permitting to Write Rights in California, and (3) Appropriation of Water in California.

Requirements of Water Diversions and Use must be filed by preparan and pre 1914 appropriate water users as set forth in Water Code Section 5100 with specific exceptions. The filing of a statement (1) provides a record of water use, (2) enables the State to notify such users if someone proposes a new appropriaion upstream from their diversions, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional water is available for future purposes.

An appropriate right is required for use of water on non-parenal land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriate rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1941, new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State. Appropriate rights can be granted to waters "foreign" to the natural stream system.

A major limitation of this study is the lack of information on the water use patterns of individual households. This lack of information makes it difficult to determine the impact of individual households on the water use patterns of the entire watershed.

There are two principal types of surface water rights in California. They are riparian and appropriative rights.

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water on his riparian land. Riparian land must be in the same watershed as the water source and must never have been severed from the source of supply by an intervening parcel without reservation of the riparian right to the severed parcel. Generally, a riparian user must share the water supply with other riparian users. Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or to divert water which originates in a different water shed, or return flows from use of groundwater.

An appropriative right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus of water. Since 1914 new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State.
